ROY ALLISON is Senior Research Fellow in the Centre for International Studies at the University of Oxford. He is also Head of the Russia and Eurasia Programme at the Royal Institute of International Affairs, London. His principal areas of research are Russian/Eurasian foreign and security policies and the nature of the new regionalism. He directs projects on “Subregionalism and Foreign Policy Transformation: Russia and Iran in Central Asia” and “Prospects for Collaboration between Russia and the West in Responding to New Security Challenges since September 11.” Allison was Visiting Scholar at the Carnegie Moscow Center in January–March 2004. Allison is also working on a project on “Inclusion without Membership: Bringing Russia, Ukraine and Belarus Closer to Europe.” His recent books include Central Asian Security: The New International Context (co-edited, 2001); Security Dilemmas in Russia and Eurasia (co-edited, 1997); and Internal Factors in Russian Foreign Policy (co-author, 1996). He sits on the editorial board of several academic journals, including International Affairs.

ALEXEI G. ARBATOV is Scholar in Residence at the Carnegie Moscow Center. He is a member of the Yobloko faction and served, until recently, as a member of the Russian Duma, where he was Deputy Chairman of the Defense Committee and Chairman of the Subcommittee for International Security and Arms Limitations. He holds a Ph.D. in History from the Moscow State Institute of International Relations of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the USSR. Before serving in the Duma, he worked as a senior researcher, leading specialist, sector head, and department head of the Institute of the World Economy and International Relations of the Academy of Sciences of the USSR, Moscow.

PAVEL K. BAEV is Senior Researcher and Head of the Foreign and Security Policies Program at the International Peace Research Institute, Oslo (PRIO). He also heads the Working Group on International Dimensions of Civil Wars at the Centre for the Study of Civil War at PRIO. He holds an M.A. in Political Geography from Moscow State University and a Ph.D. in International Relations from the Institute of USA and Canada. Prior to joining PRIO, Baev worked in the USSR Ministry of Defense and in the Institute of Europe in Moscow. He has served as co-editor of Security Dialogue and held the NATO Democratic Institutions Fellowship. He is author of several books, including The Russian Army in a Time of Troubles (1996). His articles on Russia's military posture, Russian-European relations, and peacekeeping and conflict management in Europe have appeared in Armed Forces & Society, European Security, International Peacekeeping, Jane's Intelligence Review, Journal of Peace Research, Journal of Slavic Military Studies, Security Dialogue, and The World Today.

ALEKSANDR GOLTS is Deputy Editor-in-Chief of the new political magazine Yejenedelnyi journal (Weekly Journal). He holds an M.A. in Journalism from Moscow State Lomonosov University. Golts has been a leading columnist and commentator on Russian military affairs for more than two decades. He has served on the editorial board of the Russian military daily Krasnaya zvezda (Red Star), where he also published a weekly column and covered Russian foreign and domestic policy. He also served as Military Editor of Itogi, a premier Russian news magazine, until he and other members of the Itogi staff were locked out of their offices in April 2001. In addition, he is a contributor to Jane's Defense Weekly. Golts is co-author of Russia: The New Security Parameters (1995) and has been working, most recently as a Visiting Fellow at Stanford University's Center for International Security and Arms Control, on a book about military reform in Russia.

ROSE GOTTEMOELLER is Senior Associate at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace where she holds a joint appointment with the Russian and Eurasian Program and the Global Policy Program. Gottemoeller's research at the Carnegie Endowment focuses on issues of nuclear security and stability, nonproliferation, and arms control. Before joining the Endowment in October 2000, she served as Deputy Undersecretary for Defense Nuclear Nonproliferation in the U.S. Department of Energy. Previously, she served as Deputy Director of the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London from 1993 to 1994, and before that she served on the National Security Council in the White House as Director for Russia, Ukraine, and Eurasia Affairs, with responsibility for denuclearization in Ukraine, Kazakhstan, and Belarus. Gottemoeller's recent publications include "Arms Control in a New Era" Washington Quarterly (Spring 2002); "A Deal That Worked," New York Times (April 26, 2003); "On Nukes, We Need to Talk," Washington Post (April 2, 2002); and "U.S. Must Help Russia Diminish Nuclear Risk," Los Angeles Times (November 12, 2001).

STEVEN E. MILLER is Director of the International Security Program at Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government. He is Editor-in-Chief of the quarterly journal International Security and co-editor of the BCSIA Studies in International Security book series (published by MIT Press). Previously, he was Senior Research Fellow at the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI) and taught Defense and Arms Control Studies in the Department of Political Science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Miller is a member of the Council of the International Institute for Strategic Studies, the Committee on International Studies of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the Advisory Committee of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, and the Scientific Committee of the Landau Network Centro Volta (Italy). He is co-chair of the American Pugwash Committee and a member of the Council of International Pugwash. Within Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, Miller serves on the steering committees of the Kokkalis Program on Southeastern and East-Central Europe and of the Harvard Ukrainian Project. He is co-author of the recent monograph, Avoiding Nuclear Anarchy: Containing the Threat of Loose Russian Nuclear Weapons and Fissile Material, and of its predecessor, Soviet Nuclear Fission: Control of the Nuclear Arsenal in a Disintegrating Soviet Union (1991). Miller is editor or co-editor of some two dozen books, including, most recently, Nationalism and Ethnic Conflict (1997), Debating the Democratic Peace (1996), and The Perils of Anarchy: Contemporary Realism and International Security (1995).

VITALY V. SHLYKOV is an Adviser to the President of United Heavy Machinery Corporation, Russia's biggest engineering company and a significant weapons producer. A graduate of the Institute for International Relations and the Military Diplomatic Academy in Moscow, he also holds a Ph.D. from IMEMO. He served in the military intelligence of the Soviet General Staff from 1958 to 1988. He then served as Deputy Chairman of the State Committee on Defense of the Russian Federation with the rank of Deputy Minister in the Russian government, where his responsibilities included the defense industry and its budget from 1990 to 1992. Shlykov is a founding member of Russia's Council on Foreign and Defense Policy, a non-governmental research organization.

DMITRI V. TRENIN is a Senior Associate of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and Deputy Director of the Carnegie Moscow Center. Before joining the Endowment in 1994, he served in the Soviet and Russian army. Colonel Trenin's postings included Iraq (with the military assistance group, 1975–1976), Germany (liaison with the Western powers in Berlin, 1978–1983), and Switzerland (Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces and Strategic Arms Reduction talks, 1985–1991). For several years, Trenin taught area studies at the Defense University in Moscow. He was also a Senior Fellow at NATO Defense College (1993) and, upon retirement from the military, Visiting Professor at the Vrije Universiteit Brussel (1993–1994). At the Endowment, Trenin co-chairs the Foreign and Security Policy Program. He is the author of several books, including Russia's Restless Frontier (co-authored, forthcoming); The End of Eurasia: Russia on the Border between Geopolitics and Globalization (two printings, 2002 and 2001); A Strategy for Stable Peace: Toward a Euroatlantic Security Community (co-authored, 2002); Russia's China Problem (1998); and Baltic Chance: The Baltic States, Russia, and the West in the Emerging Greater Europe (1997). Among the books Trenin has edited are Ambivalent Neighbors: The NATO and EU Enlargement and the Price of Membership (2003); Russia and the Main Security Institutions in Europe: Entering the 21st Century (2000); Kosovo: International Aspects (1999); and Commonwealth and Security in Eurasia (1998). Trenin is a member of the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London and of the Russian International Studies Association. A frequent commentator for the world media, he serves on the editorial boards of International Politics, Pro et Contra, and Baltic Course.
